Hanifaru Bay is a sanctuary for people who love snorkeling with manta rays and whale sharks. This UNESCO biosphere reserve in the Maldives is legally designated as a Marine Protected Area. Consequently, there are strict regulations in place to protect and preserve this amazing wonder of nature. The rules play a vital role to keep the mantas and whale sharks at peace while guests enjoy watching them up close.

The manta ray & whale shark season is from May to November. In this period, planktons get trapped in the funnel-like reef, and the concentration of planktons attracts whale sharks and schools of manta rays. As a result, there could be over hundreds of mantas and several whale sharks feeding off the coral reef at any time. This is the world's largest feeding station known to exist.
